

COVER CROPS

Cover crops help increase organic matter in the soil and improve overall soil health by adding living roots to the soil during more months of the year.

Cover crops can improve water infiltration into the soil. Deep-rooted crops like forage radishes create natural water passages. Legume cover crops serve as natural fertilizers while grasses scavenge nutrients that are often lost after harvest or during winter.

